

Careers - MSc in Strategy & Organisation Consultancy

The consulting industry is highly competitive. It is a significant source of employment for young graduates in virtually every part of the world. The programme aims to prepare the students for consultancy work in the following environments:

- Large consulting firms working in different areas (Strategy Consulting, Management Consulting, Information Technology (IT) Consulting, Human Resource Consulting,...).
- Corporate strategy departments that support and advise the board of directors to prepare their annual report and the strategic business plan.
- Small firms that specialise in a specific industry.
- Internal Consulting Groups within companies and organisations. In this case, the consultants are company employees who act as a third party and can potentially provide more fitting solutions through their internal knowledge and experience.
- Independent freelancing for companies or organisations in a specific area of expertise.
- All other careers that require critical thinking about global management and leadership in small, medium or large companies. On successful completion of the programme, you will have solid foundations in strategic analysis, complex problem solving and insights into human behaviour that will allow you to pursue a range of career paths.
